BOVDICCA'S Revolt fails
The queen of the ICENI leads a rebellion against the Romans. The revolt that came nearest to success was led by Queen Boudicca, widow of PRASUTAGUS, the Roman client king of the EAST ANGLICAN tribe, the ICENI. Angered by loss of land to Roman soldiers (especially the degradation after King Prasutagus's death) and heavy tribute imposed on them, the ICENI rose in rebellion toward the end of 60 AD. They had also rebelled 13 yrs earlier when the Romans deprived them of the right to bear arms. Fierce fighting lasted for several months. But after taking London and St ALBANS (VERULANUM), burning them and massacring their inhabitants while the main army of the Roman governor, SEXTONIUS PAULINUS, was in Wales fighting the DRUIDS, the ICENI disintegrated into separate plundering bands. The final battle took place in the South Midlands where 17,000 Roman soldiers easily overcame a vastly larger but untrained rebel horde. About 8,000 British men, women and children were slain.

Boudicca escaped to the woods where she is believed to have committed suicide by poison.
